Hope's Centennial Labor Tyranny in New York

Monday's news story on this page reminded citizens that Hope as an incorporated town will be 100 years old in 1975. The Centennial program will begin in September 1974.

If you have consulted the current City Directory, published in 1967 by Moorhead Directory Service, you may be confused over the Centennial date. The foreword of the Directory reads as follows:

"History—Hope was founded in the year 1852 when the Cairo & Fulton Railroad (ed. note: Now the Missouri Pacific) made a survey for a new railroad for the area. The name Hope was given the town by the Railroad Land Commissioner in honor of his daughter, Hope Loughborough. In 1873 Congress granted the railroad 40 acres of land for the town site. It was incorporated in 1875 and held its first election in that year."

I spent a month in researching local history for The Star's Arkansas Centennial Edition of June 26, 1936—judged by the librarian of the Alamo to be the best Centennial edition published in either Arkansas or Texas that year.

My information, published in the Centennial, was that Hope became a settlement in 1873, the year the Cairo & Fulton Railroad actually came through here. Incorporation as a city followed in 1875.

The 1852 date for our founding is absurd. Washington then was the county seat and commercial center, and there was nothing to create and support a town on Hope's site. Wagon traffic and commerce flowed overland through Washington to Fulton, the navigation head for Red River.

The coming of the railroad in 1873 changed both the commercial and political picture. Washington had been offered the rail route but rejected it. Therefore the survey followed a more southerly route, creating Hope. Washington declined commercially as Hope grew, and finally the county seat also moved to Hope.

I don't know who was responsible for accepting the faulty history reported in the City Directory—but I registered a sharp dissent the day I got my copy. Here on the eve of our Centennial celebration we find we are embarrassed by a paragraph in a City Directory prepared by outsiders. But our Centennial Edition stands pat—and the local observance of our 100th birthday will begin in 1974 and run through 1975.

The New York Daily News, largest circulated newspaper in the United States, faces a shutdown this Thursday because a mere 60 of possibly 5,000 employees have gone on strike, according to press dispatches.

The 60 are guards, members of Teamsters Local 820. They walked off the job last week. Fellow teamsters refused to cross the guards' picket lines—newsprint trucks are paralyzed, and the Daily News has on hand only enough paper to run until this Thursday.

This is the kind of union tyranny which has helped to destroy the newspaper business in New York City. There were 22 papers when I was in Columbia University in 1922—now there are but three.

It doesn't make sense—using union power to destroy the very jobs unionization is supposed to promote; but that's the record wherever Big Labor has its way.

Bombers knock out 2 bridges

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. pilots reported they knocked out two more railroad bridges in North Vietnam within 25 miles of the Chinese border Monday, a few hours before Peking broadcast a strong protest against American air attacks along China's southern frontier.

Military spokesmen said 2,000-pound laser bombs brought down the two bridges on the northeast rail line to China and that they had not been hit before. They were 55 and 60 miles northeast of Hanoi.

U.S. planes have bombed North Vietnam's two railroads to China repeatedly in the past week at points 20 to 30 miles from the border. The Chinese Foreign Ministry in a statement broadcast Monday night said the air raids threatened the security of China and were "grave provocations against the Chinese people."

The U.S. Command said American pilots flew more than 290 strikes against targets in North Vietnam on Monday. B-52 bombers battered North Vietnamese supply dumps north of the demilitarized zone today for the sixth successive day.

North Vietnam claimed its gunners shot down a U.S. Phantom jet fighter-bomber northeast of Hanoi on Monday.

The U.S. Command said it had no plane losses to report, but it disclosed the loss of the third OH-6 observation helicopter in two days 13 miles southwest of Hue. One crewman was reported missing and one wounded in the crash Monday.

The South Vietnamese command said 51 North Vietnamese were killed and 105 weapons and 15 field radios were captured in a series of clashes Monday at An Loc and south of the city along Highway 13. Nine South Vietnamese were reported killed and 24 wounded.

Field reports indicate the South Vietnamese are beginning to break through the 68-day-old siege at An Loc, a provincial capital 60 miles north of Saigon. But U.S. advisers say the siege cannot be considered lifted until Highway 13 is open. It is the only overland route to the city.

Agents probing damaged plane

DETROIT (AP)—Investigators said today a malfunctioning cargo door that opened in flight caused a midair incident in which an American Airlines DC-10 was damaged but managed to make it safely back to Detroit's Metropolitan Airport Monday night.

First reports indicated the tail section of the huge Los Angeles-to-New York plane might have been ripped by an explosive. But the airline quoted the FBI as saying there was no evidence of an explosive device being involved.

The 56 passengers and 11 crew members all escaped serious injury as the jet ran off a runway during an emergency landing.

Lavelle says would order raids again

WASHINGTON (AP) — The former U.S. air commander in Vietnam, fired for ordering unauthorized air strikes against North Vietnamese units had taken some kind of action against UMS planes or other forces that would justify the "protective reaction" retaliatory U.S. strikes.

"If I had it to do over, I would do the same thing," Gen. John D. Lavelle told a House armed services subcommittee. However, he said, he would "check into reporting procedures better" before issuing the order.

Lavelle was recalled from Vietnam after reports prepared by officers under his command were forwarded to Washington indicating falsely that the North Vietnamese had undertaken some kind of attack to justify the retaliatory strikes.

Lavelle said he believed his superiors, including Gen. Creighton Abrams, knew of the air strikes he ordered without specific permission between last January and March 10.

Gen. John D. Ryan, Air Force chief of staff, said he recalled Lavelle as commander of the U.S. 7th Air Force in Indochina last March 23 after learning of 28 strikes involving 147 planes that he said violated terms of the 1968 bombing halt which permitted only retaliatory "protective reaction" strikes.

Lavelle said he relayed pilots' reports of Hanoi's buildup of MIGs at three airfields near the demilitarized zone plus 133 millimeter heavy artillery, anti-aircraft guns, missiles, tanks and supplies and finally asked Abrams in January for permission to attack them.

He said Abrams relayed the request to Washington and when the only reply was to "prepare a plan" he ordered the strikes on his own.

Lavelle said he ordered the raids halted March 19 when an investigating officer showed him three false reports that were forwarded to higher headquarters and his staff determined he could not continue what we were doing and report it accurately."

He and Ryan indicated the three reports falsely said North Vietnamese units had taken some kind of action against UMS planes or other forces that would justify the "protective reaction" retaliatory U.S. strikes.

Senate race, vote for county judge on today's ballot

Slightly less than 500,000 voters throughout the state are expected to go to the polls today to vote in the runoff between Sen. John L. McClellan and Rep. David Pryor for the Democratic nomination to McClellan's Senate seat.

In Hempstead County, in addition to casting ballots for the Senate race, voters will also decide between County Judge Finis Odom and County Assessor Carter Sutton, who are trying for Odom's post. County Clerk Mrs. Pat House predicted early this morning a light voter turnout in the 32 polling places in the county. More than 6,400 of the county's 10,241 registered voters voted in the preferential primary two weeks ago, but estimates on today's turnout ranged downward from 5,000. Polls will stay open until 7:30.

At 11:30 a.m. today, a check of all voting precincts in Hope showed that only 921 persons had voted.

In the June 30 primary, McClellan outpolled Pryor in this county, 3,320 to 2,680. Third-runner Ted Boswell was well back with 387, and Foster Johnson received only 89 votes. Statewide McClellan squeezed by Pryor by less than 10,000 votes.

Sutton gained a runoff berth against Odom by polling 2,244 votes; Odom garnered 2,605 and the third man in the race, Perry Henley, tallied 1,737.

In the Senate race, Pryor is considered the most serious challenge to McClellan in his 30-year career as a senator.

McClellan received 44.7 per cent of the votes on June 30, and Pryor obtained 41.3 per cent.

Politicians were trying Monday to assess the impact, if any, on the election of Sunday night night's hour-long debate between McClellan and Pryor. Both sides, while claiming victory, said they were delighted at the response they had received.

The senator, 76, spent Monday on the telephone exhorting supporters to get out a big vote. He hopes to overcome an Arkansas tradition that incumbents lose in runoffs. Pryor, 37, serving his third term in Congress, made an election-eve television appearance to appeal for votes.

Gene Newson, the state's best-known polster, said the race was "too close to call."

All Around Town

One-hundred and thirty-nine students have been named to the spring semester Dean's List at Southern State College Dr. L. A. Logan, academic dean, has announced. Thirty-five of the students had 4.00 (all A) grade point averages. Hope students included on the list are Phillip Barton, Judith Bright, Marilyn McMahon, and William Reinhardt. Amelia Harris of Saratoga and Janice Hastings are also on the list.

First Lieutenant Ronald F. Stuart, 24, son of Verga Stuart of 601 South Laurel, Hope, is attending an air defense missile course at the U.S. Army Air Defense School, Ft. Bliss, Tex. The eight-week course provides training in the operations and tactics of the Army's Hawk Missile System.

There are 26 Hempstead County residents presently enrolled at Southern State College for the first summer session. The total enrollment for the first term is 840. Twenty of these students are from Hope, three from Blevins, and three from Saratoga.

Joyce Marie Battee, a 1972 graduate of Hope High School is enrolled in the summer session at Henderson State Teachers College. Miss Battee is studying nursing. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Battee and the niece of Miss Ernestine Jack of Hope.

Boyhood dream comes true

Not everyone has a red caboose in their backyard.

However, Wayne Porter of Hope does. Porter's caboose was built in June 1916 for the C & O Railroad and was sold in 1960 to Prescott Northwestern Railroad. Upon learning of the retirement of the caboose, Porter, a mechanic for Frisco, bought it and moved it to his backyard. Porter said he had no special plans for it except that as far back as he can remember he has always wanted a caboose. He has already begun restoration work during his spare time. A neighbor of Porter's was overheard to say that he thought he just might go one better and see if he could find a retired engine. Who knows, there may be a complete train in the neighborhood before these boys get through playing.

Sweaters move into top slot for fall

By ANN HENCKEN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — That modest sweater has moved into a top status slot for fall.

Jay Kobrin for Maisonet calls his fall collection "the little sweater that grew." It starts with a narrow waist-length pull-over and ends with a gold metallic dolman sleeve dress.

MRS. CHARLES STEPHEN GUNTER

Wedding vows are repeated

Miss Linda Dell Boothe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Russell Boothe of Smackover, and Charles Stephen Gunter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Gunter of Hope, were united in marriage on Saturday, June 3, at the Joyce City Baptist Church.

Rev. Ross Williams, of Mt. Ida, performed the double-ring ceremony. Vows were exchanged before a sunburst arrangement of pink gladiolas centered with a pink bow; flanked by arrangements of huckleberry.

Rex Boothe, brother of the bride, played a program of nuptial music and accompanied the soloist, Mrs. John Mahoney, when she sang "O Perfect Love" and "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden."

Nine-branched candelabra flanked the altar, and the tapers were lighted by Miss Pam Givens and Steve Waldroop. Arrangements of spring flowers marked the pews.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white silk organza designed with an empire waistline, softly flared skirt and a sweeping chapel length train.

Pearled and scalloped chantilly lace overlaid the bodice and formed the long sleeves. Scallops of lace accented the high neckline and encircled the train. Her grandmother's wedding band was sewn on the hem of the dress. The bride's shoulder length illusion veil was held in place by a headpiece of silk organza bows and lace, highlighted with teardrops and pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses and ivy.

Miss Jan Jones, of Smackover, was the maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Susie Willis, of Prescott and Miss Kathy Wilson of Fairview. They were identically dressed in formal gowns of floral printed pink organza over pink satin. The empire waist was accented by pink velvet ribbon. They wore headpieces of matching ribbon and net and carried colonial arrangements of spring flowers. Larry Massanelli, of Hope, served the groom as best man. Groomsmen were Scott Gunter, brother of the groom, of Hope, and Gary Mauney of Norphlet. The guests were ushered by Layne Beatty of Hope, and Lamar Boothe of Minden, La., brother of the bride.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Boothe wore a pink crepe dress topped with a matching jacket and accessories. Her corsage was a pink cymbidium orchid. Mrs. Gunter wore a celery green silk dress with matching accessories and a corsage of a green cymbidium orchid.

After the wedding, the parents of the bride were hosts for a reception in the Fellowship Hall of the church. The serving table was covered with a white satin cloth overlaid with white ruffled net, bordered with white satin. Arrangements of spring flowers decorated the reception room, and the wedding cake was three-tiered topped with wedding bells. Mrs. Jerry Givens, cousin of the bride, presided at the brides book.

Those in the house party included Miss Ginny Lambert of Emmet, Mrs. Allen Gandy, Mrs. P. N. May, Mrs. E. L. Givens of Smackover and Mrs. Donald Brock of Magnolia. Rice bags were distributed by Kelly and Stacy Givens.

For travel the bride donned a white knit dress accented with pink embroidery and pinned a corsage of white roses from her bouquet at her shoulder. After a trip to Colorado, Mr. and Mrs. Gunter will be at home in Hope for the summer.

The bride is a graduate of Southern State College with an Associate of Arts degree. The groom will be a senior History major this fall.

Rehearsal Dinner
On Friday, June 2, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gunter were hosts for a rehearsal dinner at the Holiday Inn in El Dorado for the Boothe-Gunter wedding party. Spring flowers decorated the T-shaped table. Covers were laid for 28. The couple chose this time to present gifts to their attendants.

THE GENERATION RAP

—by Helen and Sue Bottel

No Place to Turn?

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:
I don't know what to do. It seems like there's no way out.

I'm 17, have a four-month-old daughter, Angie, and I love her so much I can't give her up. My parents wouldn't let me marry her father (Phil), but we're living together at their home—if you can make any sense out of that!

My folks are both alcoholics. They're dead drunk every night. As much as I tell myself I hate them, I don't really—but I can't talk to them or to Phil so I keep everything bottled up inside. I'm shaking so bad right now I can't even write, and this page is already tear-stained. I don't smoke, drink or take drugs. I'm just tied in knots.

About Phil: He's 18, makes good money in two jobs, but doesn't want the responsibility of marriage and a home of his own. He spends his spare time with the guys and racing cars. He won't even take Angie and me for a ride or to the store. The only money he gives me is for Angie's food.

We were supposed to move into our own apartment on my birthday last month. Instead, he spent the day with his friends, and didn't even send me a card.

I know he feels trapped, and I don't want to admit to myself he doesn't love me. But now I have to face facts: I guess maybe I had Angie instead of an abortion because I wanted to keep Phil and get out of this house. How wrong can a girl be?

Whether he leaves or stays, I'm still a "nothing." I want to finish high school but can't trust my drunken mother to baby-sit Angie. At 17, I can't get a job, or even move out on my own—at least anywhere I could take Angie. I know I should let Phil go and give my baby up for adoption, but then I wouldn't want to live, especially without Angie. Last year I thought I was "mature," but now I'm faced with all these responsibilities, I don't want to grow up!

There just isn't any place to turn. Or is there, Helen?—SUSAN
DEAR SUSAN:

There ARE places to turn: The Child Welfare Agency in your city might place you and your baby in a foster home until you have finished school and can be on your own. Also, a minister could refer you to a church group which might help. Or, perhaps, a friend?

Above all, don't feel that you are locked into a non-marriage. If Phil won't be a husband—in an apartment he provides for you and Angie—tell him to be on his way!—HELEN
DEAR SUSAN:
There's still a chance that Phil might shape up, if you'd move away from your family and into an apartment where he'd feel as if he had a real wife and daughter. Guys change, when they acquire responsibilities. Sometimes, anyway.

Put it to him straight: marriage (your folks will surely give their consent now), a place of your own, and a lot more love, or good-bye.—SUE
DEAR RAP:

Do you think it's fair for guys who run from the draft, like to Canada, to return without punishment? A lot of people are saying they should have complete amnesty, not even a slap on the wrist.

I was drafted and fought in Vietnam. A friend of mine, also drafted, was killed, and another is still in a Veterans Hospital. We paid our price. Why should the draft dodgers get off free?—NOT A COWARD

DEAR NOT:

Let's get this straight: Not all "draft dodgers" are cowards. As one of them wrote from Canada: "I'm here because I refuse to kill a fellow human who is not my enemy and does not threaten my country." Sometimes it takes a good deal of courage to follow your convictions, if they lead you away from friends, family and home.

Amnesty? After the fighting is done, perhaps the United States will be as lenient as it has been in other wars. For now? Well, let's ask Sue:

DEAR NOT:
I think that "dodgers" should be allowed to return now, if they will give at least two years to the U.S., in some sort of work like Vista or the Peace Corps or helping to rebuild war-torn countries. Granting them complete amnesty might start another "little war" right here in the states.

Maybe this isn't as big a problem as some people think: I've read that most of the draft evaders in Canada have said they want to stay there.—SUE (GOT A PROBLEM? Or a subject for discussion, two-generation style? Direct your questions to either Sue or Helen Bottel—or both, in care of this newspaper, if you want a combination mother-daughter answer.)

Mets get nostalgic, lose game to Braves

By HAL ROCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Once upon a time, there was a baseball team—a very bad baseball team—called the New York Mets. This particular baseball team had a very difficult time with the national pastime.

After many years of very bad baseball, this team started to change. Soon, it became respectable and even won a world championship. But no matter how successful it became, this team always remembered its humble beginnings.

The Mets got nostalgic in the eighth inning of Monday night's game at Atlanta and in a spectacular recreation of their early, zany years, they delivered an 8-7 victory to the Braves.

Elsewhere on Monday's abbreviated schedule in the National League, Houston downed Montreal 3-1 and St. Louis edged Los Angeles 3-2.

In the American League, Detroit nipped Minnesota 2-1, Texas whacked Milwaukee 7-1 and Baltimore blanked Oakland 1-0.

New York used home runs by John Milner, Wayne Garrett, Rusty Staub and Ken Boswell to build a 7-4 lead as the Braves came to bat in the eighth. With Tug McGraw working in relief of Gary Gentry, Atlanta bunched three singles by Ralph Garr, Rico Carty and Hank Aaron for one run.

Then the nostalgia hit. Darrell Evans attempted to sacrifice Aaron and pinch runner Sonny Jackson along. He bunted towards first base and Cleon Jones threw to Garrett at third, trying for the force. The play looked good except for one thing, Garrett forgot to catch the ball.

Aaron and Jackson both scored, tying the game and Evans wound up on third base. Next, rookie Dusty Baker lofted a fly ball to center and Tommie Agee angled over for it as Evans tagged up, getting ready to try and score. It looked like it would be a close play at the plate except for one thing, Agee forgot to catch the ball.

The loss tumbled New York out of first place in the National League East.

Jerry Reuss scattered six hits, pitching Houston past Montreal.

Lee May cracked out of a slump with three hits for the Astros who bounced from behind against the Expos.

Lou Brock singled home St. Louis' winning run in the fifth inning and then made a sparkling catch to shut out a Los Angeles rally in the seventh.

Reggie Cleveland earned the victory with a four-hitter, besting Bill Singer.

Bob Gibson

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Editor

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (NEA) — The clubhouse was otherwise empty, they thought.

And those few white St. Louis Cardinal players sat on stools at their spring training camp site here recently and talked casually. One of the players used the word "nigger." The player then happened to look up. He was shocked to see Bob Gibson, the star black pitcher, standing there.

"Nothing happened," said Gibson, to a reporter later. "I looked at him and he looked at me."

"I'm not going to tell you who it was or what he was saying. Maybe I will when I retire. But right now specifics might hurt the team, and we've got a good shot at the pennant."

Gibson was angry, but he couldn't stay that way. "I hear that word a lot when people don't know I'm there," he said. "Things like that happen all the time. And if you wanted to, you could walk around sour every day of your life."

Somewhere along the line, most of us have been fed this vague belief that sports is above bigotry, now. Don't all teams have a number of black players? In a sense, sports appear a sanctuary from the realities of "the outside world."

"No," said Gibson, "what happens off the field has its counterpart in baseball."

And one would also imagine that a standout performer of the magnitude of Gibson, one who commands his salary ($150,000 a season) would be immune from those racial hurts.

"The older I get," said Gibson, "the longer these things stick with me."

And the stronger he becomes as a baseball personality, the more he demands to be respected as a human being. For example, Gibson said he was in a Las Vegas hotel this winter when a white man came up and asked him where a certain room was. Gibson didn't know.

"You don't know?" the man said. "How am I supposed to find my room?"

"Who the hell cares!" replied Gibson.

"The man thought I was a bellhop, just because I'm black," said Gibson.

"He couldn't understand," said Gibson, "that a black man could afford to vacation in an expensive place like Las Vegas. He figured all blacks are poor. And in this country, if you don't have money, you don't get respect. That's why I think all the issues, like busing and housing, are secondary for gaining integration and acceptance for the black man. It's economic power that has to come first.

"People hardly paid any attention to me until after we won the World Series in 1964, and I got the series check of, what was it after taxes, $5,000? guys were beating my door down with business deals."

Gibson says some of the racial insults are unconscious, or simply ingrained, such as white clubhouse assistants rarely thinking to put Afro combs with the shaving and grooming implements.

Then there are the overt examples, though still subtle. There still is not one black in an important administrative position on any major league club. And, of course, no black managers, either.

"I think a young black athlete is more security conscious than a young white one," said Gibson. "The young black knows that when his career is over, he's got nowhere to go. A white player at 30, say, can step out of baseball and get a job either with the club or as a car salesman or something, and start at something like $25,000 a year."

Harry Edwards, a black sociologist who led the blacks' Olympic boycott in 1968, says sports is an unrealistic dream for young black boys. And that too many try to reach the heights of a Bob Gibson, then fail and are unprepared for anything else in life.

"Maybe that was, totally true at one time," said Gibson. "But I think it's becoming less and less. Young kids are no longer as disillusioned as they used to be. There are more opportunities opening up in all other fields."

"Once we were taught we were not as good as the whites. I would see Stepin Fetchit in a movie theater and slump down in my seat in embarrassment. I knew that that's the way people thought we were supposed to be—stupid and shufflin'." And I knew I wasn't that way.

"Young blacks don't have the Stepin Fetchit inferiority complex today. Blacks are gaining more respect, even in the eyes of each other."

"When a black kid becomes 13 or 14 now, and if he comes to the realization that he doesn't have the talent or drive to become a Bob Gibson, I don't think he's crushed. There are other choices opening up for him. Not enough, but more."

"We still aren't equal, in baseball or out of baseball. It's true that things are better than they've ever been. But that's still not nearly good enough."

Phillips loses battle for life

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — Harold "Lefty" Phillips, whose 2½ seasons as manager of the California Angels ended last fall in the wake of internal strife, died Monday night of an apparent asthma attack. He was 53.

A veteran scout and coach for the Brooklyn and Los Angeles Dodgers, he was hired by the Angels in May of 1969 after California had won only 11 of its first 39 games that year. Even though the team achieved a 71-91 record that year, things looked bright for the Angels after the 1970 campaign when they won 86 games.

Off-season trades made the Angels pre-season picks prior to the 1971 season but discipline problems revolving around outfielder Alex Johnson, who was eventually suspended, made the team more of a curiosity for its locker room noises.

By season's end, even though California managed to climb to fourth in the American League West, a grand overhaul was made with Phillips stepping down to scout.

His recurring asthma was a constant problem and that was believed the cause of death. A county coroner's autopsy was pending.

With the Dodgers, Phillips signed pitcher Don Drysdale before he was elevated to pitching coach in 1964. He was hired by California as director of player personnel in 1968.

His widow Roberta, a son DeWayne, a daughter Charleen and four grandchildren survive. Funeral services were pending.

Blue loses heart-breaker

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Vida Blue's fastball is alive and humming in Oakland. Too bad the same can't be said of the A's bats whenever he pitches.

"I hope one of these games I pitch, the A's get some hits and runs," said Blue after losing a heart-breaking 1-0 game to Pat Dobson and the Baltimore Orioles Monday night.

Considering recent developments, Blue has every right to feel that way.

Winner of the Cy Young Award and Most Valuable Player in the American League last year, Blue came back late this year after contract difficulties and hasn't had much support since.

In 25 innings, the left-hander has been backed by a grand total of one run and hasn't won a game in three decisions because of it.

Elsewhere in the American League Tuesday, the Detroit Tigers defeated the Minnesota Twins 2-1 and the Texas Rangers swamped the Milwaukee Brewers 7-1.

An abbreviated schedule also was played in the National League, where the Atlanta Braves topped the New York Mets 8-7; the Houston Astros trimmed the Montreal Expos 3-1 and the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2.

James Mtr. defeated CBC 12-11

In Little League play last night at K-Park James Mtr. Co. won over CBC by a score of 12 to 11 in the first game, and the second game was won by Lions beating Barrys 5 to 2.

Bruce Hunt was the pitcher for James Mtr. Co. CBC used Ira Scott and Aaron Sheppard on the mound. Leading all hitters for the winners were Steve Banks and Bruce Hunt collecting three hits apiece. Mike Godwin was the leading hitter for the losers getting three hits.

In the second game of the evening Johnny Vickers was the pitcher for Lions, and Wayne East saw mound duty for Barrys.

Hitters for the winners were Chris Newton getting two hits at three times up, one which was his second home run. Britt Henry hit his fourth home run. The best hitters for the losers were Stan Harris, Danny Wilson, and Barry Hogan each getting one hit.

Tuesday night games will be Sheriff's vs Hope Auto at 6:30 p.m. and Greening-Ellis vs Walker's Ref. in the second game of the night.

Blue's best performance of the year was witnessed by the largest crowd to watch the A's since they moved west from Kansas City—50,182. The enormous crowd also saw Dobson pitch one of the best games of his career, a powerhouse three-hitter.

Don Buford collected one of only five hits off Blue in his eight innings of work, but it was a big one—a single in the eighth that knocked in the game's only run.

Dinosaur park unusual tourist attraction

THREE BIGUNS — James Black of Hope displays three giant cucumbers he harvested recently from his garden. Two of the cucumbers, both "China longs," measured 21 inches in length, and the other, at right, a "Burgess' burpless" variety measured 15 inches.

Parks and Tourism Department

If you're ever driving along the Beaver Dam access road 10 miles west of Eureka Springs just off U.S. Highway 62, don't be surprised (or alarmed) if you suddenly see gigantic prehistoric monsters glaring at you from the wooded hillsides.

The beasts are only part of the large, unusual menagerie in Farwell Dinosaur Park.

Created five years ago as the brainchild of noted sculptor and paleontologist Emmet Sullivan, land for the 60-acre park was provided by Ola and Maye Farwell, longtime Arkansas residents who wanted to build something for children. However, judging from the park's tremendous success, it seems adults enjoy the extraordinary park as much as the children, especially since much about the history of the earth millions of years ago can be learned by viewing these colossal creatures.

The park is open year-round from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. (Admission is $1. for adults and 50c for children over six.) Special group rates are available.

Visitors get their first glimpse of surprises to come when they enter the park and are greeted by two large green "baby" dinosaurs and a rugged, growling caveman standing in the parking lot to welcome those brave souls daring to enter the wilds of Farwell's Kingdom. Tickets may be purchased in the park's large restaurant and gift shop, and explorers are then sent on their two mile journey either by foot or by car.

Walking along the trail, visitors will notice the rock collection that lines the sides of the path. These rocks are from all across the United States and are the favorite hobby of Farwell, who is currently building a large, authentic replica of the moon to eventually house the rock collection and other exhibits. Observant visitors touring the park will also be pleased to pick up any of the numerous fossils they might find along the paths and roads.

Children will delight in recognizing many of their favorite animals along the trail such as lifelike deer, rabbits, mongooses, skunks, squirrels and a kangaroo. Monkeys are busy climbing one tree near the path while a fearsome 25-foot boa constrictor menacingly curls throughout the branches of another. The huge snake is actually a stout grapevine ingeniously painted yellow with large orange spots to transform it into a slithering reptile.

In a clearing along the trail stands a huge, ferocious brown bear which has the added distinction of serving as a home for a hive of honey bees. During the warm summer days they can be seen flying in and out of the big bear's mouth. An old-fashioned playground, including bag swings and tree houses, surround the bear, along with redwood swings and picnic tables for those who like to bring supper or lunch with them. A suspicious looking prehistoric cat boasting a seven-foot tail stands guard from its lofty perch in a tree while a buffalo and two cavemen cautiously eye visitors from the edge of the clearing.

Those who become dizzy easily should perhaps avoid the next feature of the park, the creaking, wooden, swinging bridge which hovers high above Cedar Creek and a beautiful waterfall. On the other side of the bridge is the area where most of the prehistoric monsters can be found and visitors will enjoy bringing their cameras along to capture unusual, striking pictures in the park.

Serenely still, Dinosaur Park Lake lies in the center of the park valley and a charming little pavilion reached by swinging bridges stands in the middle of the lake. Youngsters will enjoy feeding the thousands of trout that swarm around the pavilion with food dispensed from a small machine there.

In Eureka Springs, there are an endless variety of art galleries, museum and craft shops to see, plus the well known Biblical Passion Play presented from May 26 to October 28. Shoppers will also enjoy the gift shop in the Dinosaur Park which features many handmade crafts, sculptures, leather items and homemade jellies and jams.

Farwell's Dinosaur Park in the heart of the Ozarks is truly a different place to visit and offers exceptional entertainment any time of the year. The outstanding park not only takes visitors back in history, but back before history to the fascinating and incredible age of monsters.

McGovern gaining support from 'middle-of-the-road'

NEW YORK (AP) — The middle of the road in American politics is moving George McGovern's way and George McGovern is there to meet it. That, at least, is the opinion of the liberal senator from conservative South Dakota.

Campaigning without major opposition for next Tuesday's Democratic presidential primary here, McGovern told approximately 4,000 enthusiastic lower-middle income Bronx apartment dwellers Monday:

"I was advised every day by pundits and some of my advisers to move toward the center."

But, he said, "the center is moving to us. The people are not looking for a leader who straddles every issue by standing in the middle of the road."

"They're looking for a leader who will stand for change, who recognizes that we're in deep trouble in this country ..."

To back up his own analysis, McGovern spent much of the day boosting programs he has long called for, including immediate withdrawal of all U.S. forces from South Vietnam. That drew the greatest crowd reaction as he campaigned Monday.

Just last week McGovern flew to Houston, Tex., where the National Governors' Conference was in session, in an attempt to soothe the feathers of ruffled Democratic governors who generally said a McGovern-led Democratic ticket against President Nixon this year would force heretofore moderate and conservative Democrats to vote Republican in November.

McGovern told them he would consider new ways to reach his goals but would not compromise on his basic proposals of ending the war with or without assurance that American prisoners would be released, putting defense money into domestic programs and rewriting the welfare program.

The senator, frontrunning candidate for the Democratic nomination, has no major opposition in this campaign for the year's last primary. He is the only major candidate with delegate slates filed in most of the state's 39 congressional districts.

The only question to be determined next Tuesday is how many of New York's 278 Democratic delegates McGovern wins.

He says he considers 200 a minimum and some of his aides have reportedly projected that he'd win 225 or more.

have brought in more people."

But political conventions attract more than the delegates, and Pomerance has been planning for months to prevent chaos in the streets. By convention time, his 250 men will have received about 100 hours training on mob psychology and the importance of dissent.

Some of the seminars have involved talks with spokesmen for groups that plan to demonstrate, including Abbie Hoffman and Jerry Rubin of the Yippies.

At 6-feet, 260 pounds with broad shoulders, Pomerance looks like the stereotype of a cop's cop.

His woodpaneled office is windowless.

Book shelves take up wall space. There are police administration texts, Miami Beach ordinances, novels—"The Godfather" by Mario Puzo, "In Cold Blood" by Capote. There is "Crime in America" by Estes Kefauver, the late Democratic senator from Tennessee, and "Attorney for the Damned" by Darrow.

Pomerance's formal education stopped after high school. He had been valedictorian at Public School 6 in the Bronx and received straight A's at Evander Childs High School.

Pomerance moved to Miami Beach with his mother after high school. His father had died when he was 5.

Pomerance was refused by the Naval Air Corps in World War II because of poor color perception, but was accepted by the Merchant Marine. After the war, he spent a year in the Army.

He had fought on the streets of the Bronx, and he became a service boxer, "fighting for three-day passes and a steak."

Returning to Miami Beach, Pomerance became a mailman, then joined the police department because "they paid more than what I was doing."

Man dies trying to save his son

NORTH LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Timothy Allen Difoggi, 19, of North Little Rock, an airman at the Little Rock Air Force Base, drowned Monday night when he jumped into the Arkansas River at Burns Park in an attempt to save his small son.

The child was rescued by an unidentified person.

Big expansion of SS program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee completed work today on a $17.6-billion measure containing the greatest expansions of Social Security and welfare in history. The bill would raise Social Security benefits 10 per cent for 27.8 million recipients, impose strong new work requirements on many welfare recipients and make many changes in the Medicare and Medicaid health programs. Winding up 11 months of consideration of the monumental bill, the panel adopted new Social Security payroll tax schedules raising the levies for the 96 million Americans who pay them. The new schedules would mean a tax hike of $113.40 next year.

Concern expressed at beatings

WARSAW (AP) — U.S. Embassy officials went to Poland's Foreign Ministry on Monday and expressed their concern over the incident in which two Associated Press newsmen were beaten up by Cubans accompanying Fidel Castro.

"We made representations and the ministry expressed its regret," an American spokesman said.

The U.S. move follows similar action taken by the British Embassy—since one of the AP correspondents is British.

Last week four Cubans identifying themselves as journalists—burst into the Warsaw office of AP, accusing Nicholas Lillitos, a London-born newsmen, of writing "untruths" about the Cuban prime minister's health.

They also beat up George Brodzki, his Polish assistant, fracturing two ribs.

A reliable Polish state source earlier had told Lillitos that the Cuban leader was suffering from heart strain and had been medically advised to ease up.

Boiling it down

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Many fathers of young daughters complain about either the quality or quantity of suitors who come knocking at their doors.

I have no problems on either score.

The suitors if that's the right word of my daughter Tracy Ann, who is nearly 10, are far better than his proud father feels she deserves as to quantity, they have been stumbling into our apartment like confused moths in limitless numbers since Tracy had her fifth birthday.

They have my sympathy. She treats them as a medieval Russian empress might treat a clumsy serf. I have always told Tracy that if her husband later wanted to run away from home because of this kind of treatment, I would lend him the money. She doesn't like much to hear me say that.

I called seldom at the homes of young ladies when I was a teenager, and the visits were always as brief as possible. I was sorta tongue-tied in the presence of parents, and felt their unspoken questioning of my evil intentions.

But the young men today who ring my front bell and try to make it sound like a circus caliope are no such social cripples. I envy them their breezy assurance. They have more self-confidence at 18 to 20 than I have at three score and one.

By and large, I like them very much. They dress like the inhabitants of a hobo jungle, but they are all clean. They are noisy, but there isn't a hop-head, weirdo or premature drunk in the lot. And not one of them has ever been lippy with me. This may be because my daughter has warned them all, "I am the daughter of an ogre—please don't give him any excuse to start shedding your blood."

Not one of these young commandos has showed up with a box of candy or bouquet of flowers. Now and then, however, one will arrive with a bouquet of pizza pie.

About half of the boys wear beards, and I call them all "Fuzzy." I asked one of the new bearded ones the other day, "Why did you grow a beard? Are you about to undertake the principal role in the Second Coming?" "No," he answered, "I'm simply traveling incognito this year."

All the clean-shaven ones over six feet tall I call "Jack," because the one I like best falls in that category.

"Why do you call the others by Jack's name—that's not fair," said Tracy.

"Because he returns my neckties he borrows, is too big to wear my shirts, and gives me cigars for Christmas," I told her. What possible grown man would wish on a fine, up-standing, good-hearted boy like Jack a fate like that? After all, what kind of daughters do ogres have?

Flood victims being buried in Rapid City

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) — Burial of Rapid City's flood victims begins today in three cemeteries while survivors continue the search for the dead.

Individual graveside services will be conducted for the identified victims who died late Friday and early Saturday when rain-swollen Rapid Creek erupted through this city of 43,000 persons in the shadow of the Black Hills.

"The services will probably go for at least a week," said a funeral director. A mass memorial service is scheduled Sunday at a local high school.

Civil Defense reported Sunday that the death toll stood at more than 200, but on Monday it said the toll was 175. However, newsmen counted 161 identified bodies and 31 unidentified, a total of 192. The toll was expected to climb.

A spokesman said duplication of reports and confusion caused erroneous reports. Officials said some bodies were moved to nearby communities Sunday when three Rapid City mortuaries used as temporary morgues became overcrowded.

The Omaha (Neb.) World-Herald reported in today's editions that two cloud-seeding experiments were conducted Friday in the Rapid City area, one of them about 5 p.m., an hour before the devastating rains began.

The experiments were conducted by the Institute of Atmospheric Sciences, South Dakota School of Mines & Technology "for increasing water supply and studying the dynamics of hail production," the copyright article quotes an unnamed federal official as saying.

The newspaper quoted Prof. Arnett Dennis, chief of the institute's meteorological analysis group, as saying the experiments "had totally and absolutely nothing to do with the storm that hit Rapid City. I would stake my life on that."

As the cleanup and search continued at Rapid City, Maj. Gen. Duane L. Corning, commander of the South Dakota National Guard, said, "Guardsmen have been finding bodies all day. It will continue for days and days."

Mayor Donald Barnett said he believes many bodies were washed downstream and never will be recovered. Farmers in outlying areas were asked to search their properties for bodies.

Barnett imposed a 9 p.m. to daylight curfew for the third day.

Officials said at least 400 persons were on the missing list, but Barnett added the list was shrinking "as the living find the missing and both of them report to us."

The number of injured was impossible to estimate, officials said.

Television and Radio

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

AP Television-Radio Writer NEW YORK (AP) — NBC has launched what must be a summertime winner, pre-empting "Laugh-In" and movie broadcasts for 10 weeks of major league baseball games. A live game is a viewer's treasure when the competing channels are rerunning last winter's tales.

The opening game Monday night had the Detroit Tigers winning 2-1 over the Minnesota Twins at Bloomington, Minn. But NBC's problem was the pregame show, an innocuous enough time-killer on leisurely weekend afternoons, but an important element in holding prime-time viewers.

For the 15 minutes between 8 p.m. EDT and the game's start, something novel or slightly stimulating would have been nice.

NBC Sports, however, took the traditional road—into the archives for a bit of baseball nostalgia.

Considerably aided by old newsreel clips, Curt Gowdy narrated a crisp and pretty dull recollection of baseball coverage in the old radio days, evoking the name, voice and picture of Graham McNamee, Bill Stern, Paul Douglas and other earlier sportscasters.

It may have evoked some memories among the old timers, and it did plug an awkward gap, but it would have been more fun to find out what Marshall Dillon was up to.

CBS' first experiment with game shows in years will end at the end of the month. "The Amateur's Guide to Love" will depart after a minimum 13 weeks. CBS will replace it with one of its favorite standbys, a rerun of a nighttime situation comedy, in this instance "My Three Sons."

The cancellation of the game show ends another attempt to wring some entertainment out of the concealed-camera gimmick which worked well for many years on "Candid Camera." The latter show was sometimes hilarious, but no one has ever been able to match its style and way-out practical jokes.

"Amateur's Guide to Love," with Gene Rayburn as host, was a flimsy effort in which a pretty girl or an attractive young man asked strangers of the opposite sex to make fools of themselves as they were steered right into focus.

Singer James Darren, for instance, approached girls, one by one, in a book shop and invited them to experiment in togetherness by joining him in a "three-way" pair of slacks.

The result was a daily series that came off vulgar, phony and a bit desperate.

Conservative court aim of Nixon is successful

By BARRY SCHWEID

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's drive to put a conservative face on the Supreme Court is meeting with success. But the rightward drift in criminal law is not interrupted. Sometimes the Court seems to be going in two directions at once as it did Monday.

With resistance from only two of the Nixon nominees, Lewis F. Powell Jr. and William H. Rehnquist, the Court in one ruling actually expanded one of the landmark decisions of the liberal '60s: the right of all defendants, rich or poor, to have a lawyer defend them at trial.

The opinion came from the pen of William O. Douglas, an activist in applying the Bill of Rights long before Earl Warren even became chief justice.

Douglas said the Sixth Amendment guarantees a defendant a lawyer whenever he faces a possible jail sentence. Warren's conservative successor, Warren E. Burger, went along. So did Harry A. Blackmun, another Nixon nominee.

It wasn't until 1963 and the Gideon decision that defendants who were charged with "serious crimes" and could not afford a lawyer were guaranteed that one would be provided by the state.

In the nine years since, the Court and most of the states have confined this right to trials that could lead to jail terms of at least six months.

But Douglas said the Sixth Amendment calls for a lawyer whenever a trial could result in "deprivation of a person's liberty."

Unwary by the change this will require, he pointed out some 18,000 new lawyers are admitted to practice yearly—more than eight times the estimated number needed to represent all poor people charged with misdemeanors other than traffic offenses.

And most misdemeanors, he said, will not call for a lawyer since most do not lead to a jail sentence.

Within minutes of announcing this decision, however, the Court in another ruling carried forward the "law and order" theme of Nixon's 1968 presidential campaign. This was a 6-3 decision that gives police broader powers to conduct street searches without warrants.

Four years ago, the Court gingerly granted exceptions to the general Fourth Amendment rule that police cannot stop a citizen and search him unless the officer has "probable cause" to make an arrest.

The principal exception allowed a "stop and frisk" when the officer feared his life might be endangered.

Now the Court has gone on to approve the search of a man sitting in a parked car on the basis of a tipster's word that he is carrying a loaded handgun in his waistband.

The search, in Bridgeport, Conn., in 1966, turned up some heroin and the suspect was tried and convicted on narcotics and gun charges.

Said Justice Rehnquist, the newest and probably most conservative Nixon appointee: "The Fourth Amendment does not require a policeman who lacks the precise level of information necessary for probable cause to arrest to simply shrug his shoulders and allow a crime to occur or a criminal to escape."

Justice Thurgood Marshall, in dissent, noted that simply carrying a gun was not illegal in Connecticut. Therefore, he said, the officer had no more reason to suspect a crime than he would have if the frisked man, Robert Williams, were wearing a blue shirt.

Hoffa reveals plan to improve prisons

WASHINGTON (AP) — After four years and nine months in a federal prison, former Teamsters President Jimmy Hoffa has told Congress 26 ways to improve federal penitentiaries.

Without elaborating in his testimony prepared for a Senate subcommittee, Hoffa said:

"I have seen useless destruction of property, maiming of human beings, loss of self-respect, and inhumane treatment."

"The causes are not one-sided, but much of this can be cured by proper planning and education on the part of the prisoners and the officials of the institution."

Noting that prisons are overcrowded and have an average age of 75 years, he said the antiquated ones should be torn down and new ones built that are smaller and more comfortable.

Job training is out of line with reality, he added, with "license plate and mop bucket manufacturing" two examples "that bear little relation to potential jobs in private industry."

"It is not for humanitarian reasons alone that we must reform our corrections system," he said. "It is for our own safety. We have never faced up to the facts that most convicts will someday be released from the hell-holes we call correctional institutions. They come out, as we have seen, more bitter, more disturbed, more antisocial, and more skilled in crime than when they went in."

Hoffa said he realized that budget money for prisons did not enjoy the highest priority, but he called for:

—New prisons holding no more than 350 people, with individual cells "to retain some sort of dignity."

—Adequate, comprehensive medical and dental care, libraries, recreational space.

—Movies with more general appeal "rather than ... sex movies, and crime movies, which create nothing but problems for a majority of the prisoners."

—Better guard training, sufficient counseling and case workers, and prisoner grievance boards.

—Visiting hours that are not restricted by number of visits per week, with a proper place, with seats, for a prisoner's visiting family.

—Unrestricted mail and telephone privileges, providing the prisoners pay for their work.

Prisoners should receive a minimum wage for prison work, with an active job procurement program to secure work for them when they get out, he said.

Mostby upheld by court

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas Supreme Court upheld Monday the refusal by Circuit Court Judge John S. Mostby to dismiss two hot check charges against Charles Gardner.

Gardner had maintained that he was denied a speedy trial in Craighead County.

He was arrested April 9, 1971, and was charged four days later for violating the state's hot check law. Unable to make the $1,500 bond he remained in jail until his case came to trial seven months later.

His attempt to get the case transferred to the civil division of Circuit Court was denied because of a congested docket. He contended in his appeal that one criminal and three civil terms of the three-division court had expired and this violated a state law requiring him to be tried within three terms of court or be released.

The high court said the sections of the law were more than 100 years old and "obviously not enacted with over-lapping terms of multidivision circuit courts in mind," thus applying only to terms in one division.

Gardner also claimed a violation of per curiam order of the Supreme Court, issued June 28, 1971, saying that all courts having jurisdiction over criminal offenses shall give precedence to criminal cases in which a person is held in jail.

The court said a speedy trial was not defined under the state Constitution, but that considering Gardner's seven months' wait in jail for a trial "it is difficult indeed to consider a trial after such delay as a speedy trial in a three-division circuit court in Arkansas where the accused may be tried in any one of the three divisions by the simple process of transferring the case from one docket to another."
